

Brightline Retail Group

Real-time personalization at scale for a national specialty retailer

Company Snapshot

Industry	Specialty Retail
Annual Revenue	$680M
Customer Base	4.2M active loyalty members across 310 stores and e-commerce
Deployment	Meridian CDP, full production, live since Q2 2025
Primary Use Case	Real-time cross-channel personalization and lifecycle marketing

The Challenge

Brightline Retail Group's marketing team relied on a batch-oriented data warehouse process that refreshed customer segments once per day. Campaign and promotional data could lag real customer behavior by up to 24 hours, causing missed cross-sell moments during high-intent shopping sessions and requiring engineering support for even minor segment changes. Marketing leadership set a goal of moving to real-time, self-serve audience activation within two fiscal quarters.

The Solution

Brightline deployed Meridian CDP to unify point-of-sale, e-commerce, loyalty, and mobile app data into a single real-time customer profile. Meridian's native identity resolution matched in-store loyalty scans to online browsing sessions within the same visit, and the no-code segment builder let the marketing team launch and adjust campaigns without engineering tickets. The initial rollout connected 12 activation channels, including email, SMS, paid social, and in-app messaging.

Results

- Time-to-insight for new customer segments dropped 38%, from an average of 26 hours to under 16 hours.
- Consolidating warehouse maintenance, third-party stitching tools, and manual segment-building labor produced $2.4M in annual operational savings.
- Marketing was able to launch net-new campaigns 3.1x faster, cutting average campaign turnaround from 11 business days to under 4.

- First activated audience segment went live 7 weeks after project kickoff, ahead of the customer's 8-week internal target.

Customer Quote

"Meridian gave our marketing team the ability to act on customer behavior the same day it happens, instead of waiting for a nightly batch job. That shift alone changed how we plan every campaign."
